

About Sami

Sami DiPasquale lives with his family in El Paso, Texas where he serves as the executive director of Abara. Sami was born in Jordan and spent the majority of his formative and young adult years in the Middle East. He holds a BA in Sustainable Development (interdisciplinary) and an MBA with a concentration in International Business. Sami has spent the last 23 years immersed in refugee and immigrant communities in the United States - working in refugee resettlement, community development, and peace building. Sami's enduring vision is to join others in bridging divides and moving toward mutual flourishing for all.
